THIS WEEK IN FOREST SCHOOL...

In Science the children have been learning about different types of animals and their characteristics. To link with their classroom learning we shared the book The Bug Collector by Alex Griffiths. The children identified and made suggestions as to how George could look after the insects better. Some children created their own ID books after looking closely at the field guides, while others created natural insect pictures. There was also some considerable amount of time devoted to creating large scale constructions and thinking of ways in which they could be improved. Some children also found a dead bug and decided to give it a burial showing care for nature.
